Management Discussion and Analysis

i. Industry structure and developments

The Disruptive Potential of Solar Power outlines that despite the current hardships of the industry, solar power has a “disruptive potential” to adversely affect other areas of the market.

The financial crisis, cheap natural gas, subsidy cuts by cash-strapped governments, and a flood of imports from Chinese solar-panel manufacturers have profoundly challenged the industry’s short-term performance. But they haven’t undermined its potential; indeed, global installations have continued to rise—by over 50% a year, on average, since 2006. The industry is poised to assume a bigger role in global energy markets; as it evolves, its impact on businesses and consumers will be significant and widespread. Utilities will probably be the first, but far from the only, major sector to feel solar’s disruptive potential.”

Solar Business worldwide has great political support. Even during the recession period many governments provided funding, subsidies and tax benefits. Leading nations are Germany, Italy, France, China, USA, Canada, India etc. The threat of climate change and obligations to reduce Green House Gas (GHG) emissions has put onus on each large country, including on India, to support renewable energy power generation vigorously.

Photovoltaic (PV) Industry –

Solar energy is one of the most economically promising renewable energy sources in the world, as well as being environmentally compatible. Considering that worldwide energy consumption is increasing with the passing of years, the growth of the photovoltaic industry is almost certain

In recent years, despite that for many countries there has been a period of economic recession, photovoltaic’s has made a record number of installations in 2011 and it has increased again in 2012. In today’s world, there are more than 100 GW installed with a production capacity of about 110 TWh annually.

Europe remains the leading region in the world with about 70 GW installed in 2012, just behind China (8.3 GW), the U.S. (7.8 GW) and Japan (6.9 GW). These countries, and more generally, the markets outside the EU, today have used only a minimal part of the potential actually available, even with some markets such as Africa, the Middle East, South East Asia and Latin America just at the beginning of their course.

Indian PV Industry – XL PV Business:

The Indian solar energy sector has been growing rapidly, in the past few years, majorly due to Government’s initiatives such as tax exemptions and subsidies. In the financial year 2014-15, the Company had come across many downturns due to resource crunch being faced by the country as a whole. Though there was growing demand for electricity, the failure on the part of conventional sources of energy to cater to the demands, the Company could not progress well.

Looking at the current market scenario, the supply-demand balance is continuing to improve in the year 2016, after a shakeout of uncompetitive capacities in the upstream sector in the previous years and a projected demand growth of 30%. Utilisation levels are forecast to return to healthier and higher levels and as a result pricing will firm up. New capacity is expected to come online in 2016 and quarterly variations in demand may cause temporary supply gluts.

Cost, efficiency and price are fundamental drivers of PV industry. Innovations across the value chain will enable higher margins for PV industry. Photovoltaic's being very environment friendly and solar energy being a much cleaner source of energy, XL aspires to drive opportunities by making available solar power to all kinds of consumers by reducing the costs .

ii. Future Outlook

The global market for solar PV is expected to triple by 2020 to almost 700 gigawatts, with annual demand eclipsing 100 gigawatts in 2019. Solar demand will likely be almost entirely market-based in 2020; a dramatic shift from 2012 when almost all demand was premised on direct incentives. One implication of an increasingly unsubsidized market is that management and governance of the electric grid will change dramatically, creating both new opportunities and challenges for solar companies. This transformation is already underway with the implementation of market-based mechanisms for PV procurement and solar companies exploring innovations in business model design.

iii. Opportunities and Threats

Opportunities

- Growing demand for solar energy in view of increasing popularity for green energy technology.
- Abundant sunshine in large parts of the country that suits for better solar power generation.
- Strong brand positioning and manufacturing capabilities that attract investors.
- Fall in investment prices on solar power generation equipments inducing investors to make better investment

Threats

- Threat from competitors
- Threat from the markets
- Decline in prices of modules
- Decline in price of Solar Photovoltaic cells and erosion of demand

iv. Risks and concerns

- Underutilisation of capacity due to industry downturn
- High risk of default on payments and low perceived value of service
- Mistrust for solar technology
- Input cost and falling selling price risk
- Government Policies regarding the imports and exports
- Liquidity and Interest Risk

v. Adequacy of internal controls

The Company has does not have adequate system of internal control due to low and negligible quantum of operations. However, the transactions are properly authorized, recorded and reported to the Management. The Company is following all the applicable Accounting Standards for properly maintaining the books of accounts and reporting financial statements.

vi. Financial performance - Overview

The Company for the year 2014-14 has recorded total revenue of ` 181.10 lakhs as against ` 206.56 lakhs for the previous year. The Company has incurred a loss after tax for the year ` 277.65 lakhs as against a loss of ` 552.71 lakhs for the previous year.

vii. Human Resource –

Human Resource stands to be the element of utmost importance for the success of any organization. The company's ability to deliver value depends on its ability to attract, motivate, empower and retain the best professional talents. XL has always focused on attracting and recruiting the best talent from all walks of the country and enjoys good brand image in the market. There is significant competition from emerging sectors, which poses inherent risks associated with the ability to hire and retain skilled and experienced professionals.
