India's Contributions to the World of Finance Are Well Known. Trade Routes, Economic and Financial Institutions Like the Guilds, Commodity dealings, Coinage in diverse forms and the invention of many instruments of trade, credit and banking were found in India as early as the Indus Valley Civilization, through the Vedas, Mauryan and Gupta Eras. The Hundi, developed by the Indian indigenous bankers is widely known as the oldest form of credit instrument. When a large part of the world did not know of capital markets, way back in 1840, brokers did business under the shade of Bombay Green. Stock market swings were also not new. The year 1860 witnessed major boom in the shares followed by fluctuations.

The Stock Exchange, Mumbai, was established on July 9th 1875. It began with 318 members who each paid Rs. 1 as entrance fee, a princely sum at the time. It began as the "native share and stock brokers' association. The journey from then has been most exciting and eventful.
