Sketch of Maruti Suzuki Vitara Brezza

New Delhi, January 08, 2016: The much awaited “compact SUV” from Maruti Suzuki will be called Vitara Brezza.

The global unveil of Vitara Brezza will take place at Delhi Auto Expo in early February.

The first sketch of Vitara Brezza points to a stylish compact SUV that is confident and energetic, designed to especially appeal the urban SUV customer. On the exterior, the designer has captured the essence of an SUV profile and infused it with the dynamism of urban vehicles.

Several elements in the exterior design impart a distinct character to the Brezza. In the words of the designer: “Balanced proportion supported by square wheel arches, short overhangs, high ground clearance and upright hood gives the vehicle a confident stance. The raising belt and rocker lines, and the roofline that slopes down gently towards the rear give the vehicle a dynamic posture.”

Drawing our attention to the nuances, the designer says: “The body surfaces are natural and sculpted tastefully to create the right interplay of highlight and shadow. Instantly recognizable floating roof over the wraparound greenhouse adds to the visual drama, and makes the Brezza stand out in the crowd.”

Stand out, it does!

Brezza, Italian for “fresh breeze”, will be launched in the Indian market a few weeks after the Delhi Auto Expo. More details will be available in the run-up to the Expo.
