Not necessary to have unions in IT sector, says Nasscom

FE BUREAU Chennai, July 20

DEFENDING THE CURRENT human resources (HR) practices in the software sector, IT industry lobby body Nasscom on Thursday said it was not necessary to have employees' union in information technology companies as they have always been engaging with their workforce at all possible levels.

While Nasscom has been in constant touch with member companies on HR issues, the apex body, is however, ready to spell out certain norms, if necessary. The IT companies are handling employee issues as per the law of the land and what is required is more effective communication and transparency to avoid controversies when job losses occur, said R Chandrasekhar, president, Nasscom. Responding to questions related to 'reported' lay-offs in the IT industry and the emergence of 'unionism' in the sector, he told a select group of journalists here that it was the fact in reality that some unpleasant cases come up at times. "The companies are doing their best. Even then, the companies should do it with sensitivity, transparency and agility," he said, while attending the Nasscom HR Summit here on Thursday.

Chandrasekhar said cyber security, mobile app development, new user interfaces, social media, data scientists and platform engineering will be the new frontiers for techies. The industry is expected to add 1.3 lakh to 1.5 lakh people in FY18 and the most of the companies will be looking at hiring skilled hands as they are making big bets on digital business, he said.

"Even this year, the industry will be a substantial net employer. It is not a case of jobless growth. It is, instead, a case of deceleration in the rate of growth of jobs, which is a different thing."

Chandrasekhar said that the need of the hour is reskilling and upskilling of employees especially in the wake of job losses and technological disruption such as automation.
