Ola bets on 10-minute delivery promise, but experts sceptical

Finger in too many pies? Market doesn't reward confusing narrative, they say

PEERZADA ABRAR & DEEPSEKHAR CHOUDHURY
Bengaluru, 13 April

Ola Dash, the quick commerce service that Ola started last year, has taken on a new challenge. Within a month of Zomato announcing food deliveries in 10 minutes, the ride-hailing major has jumped on the bandwagon. According to media reports, the food delivery pilot has started in Bengaluru.

However, industry experts are sceptical about Ola's bet on 10-minute food delivery.

In 2015, it launched an online grocery store and food delivery application for the first time. The idea was to use its taxis and drivers to also deliver groceries. But it closed its food and grocery ordering services in less than a year after launch. Ola Café and Ola Store were its first non-transportation services, but they were not nationwide.

Then came the acquisition of food delivery aggregator Foodpanda India in 2017. While the platform grew fast on the back of marketing and discounts through 2018 to hit 200,000 orders per day in 2018, it was reportedly burning too much cash, too fast. In 2019, amid rumours of the company being shut down, Ola said it was repurposing the business for another fresh bet on the sector through Cloud kitchens.

"Ola is just trying to create some noise with promises of 10-minute grocery delivery to attract investor attention since cash has suddenly become constrained for large technology (tech) companies," said an investment banker, adding, "But this is not the kind of noise pre-initial public offering (IPO) or IPO investors would want to hear about new business lines like electric vehicles or quick commerce. They would want to know about what is happening in its core ride-hailing business — scale, growth, and unit economics."

An email query to Ola about its strategy for building infrastructure and tech to deliver items in 10 minutes through its quick commerce grocery delivery arm remained unanswered.

The move has put Bhavish Aggarwal-led Ola in direct competition with Reliance-backed Dunzo, Amazon Pantry, Walmart-owned Flipkart, Swiggy, Zomato, Tata-backed BigBasket, and quick grocery delivery platform Zepto.

food delivery is different. It just might crack it, given it is already delivering a million-plus orders a day," said a food delivery unicorn executive, adding, "Ola has minuscule food delivery operations. It won't be able to generate even dish-level demand predictions to get the service up and running. Also, it has taken years to coordinate with restaurants and establish trust. Making money on a per order basis comes much later."

Ola Dash currently services nine cities (Bengaluru, Mumbai, Delhi-National Capital Region (NCR), Pune, Hyderabad, Chennai, Kolkata, Jaipur, and Lucknow) through its store-to-door service in 10 minutes, spread across 200 dark stores, offering an assortment of over 2,500 stock-keeping units. Ola aims to grow the business, taking the order size to more than 500,000 per day by the year-end.

Sreedhar Prasad, a veteran management consultant who works with tech start-ups, said if Ola is planning an IPO anytime soon, it has to clearly communicate its core competence and business model. Prasad said the market has shown that it doesn't reward a confusing narrative when a tech company has its finger in too many pies.

"It's always understandable when there is a pivot to an adjacent business," said Prasad, adding, "But ride-hailing and food deliveries have different business models. One needs to understand who will be establishing Cloud kitchen brands and setting up a dense network of localised logistics — Ola itself or a logistics partner."

Anshul Khandelwal, chief marketing officer, Ola, recently said that the company has been a leader in on-demand mobility business for more than a decade. He said the company's advanced geolocation tech, coupled with low-cost customer acquisition, gives it the unique advantage to bring the benefits of mobility to all.

The range of products available on Ola Dash includes fresh produce, snacks and beverages, instant food, homecare products, fruit and vegetables, and cooking essentials.

According to an industry report by RedSeer, the addressable market for quick commerce is projected to be over $75 billion by 2025, creating a multi-billion-dollar opportunity for players tapping this market. It is not the first time Ola has come up with a service in this space.

Ola has many rivals in this space that are also offering express delivery services. Many of them have raised huge funding rounds to scale up such services.

Dunzo, the Google-backed quick commerce player, recently raised $240 million in its latest round of funding. The investment was led by Reliance Retail Ventures, with participation from existing investors.

Kabeer Biswas, CEO and co-founder, Dunzo, said the company's supply chains for fresh fruit and seasonal vegetables ensure that produce reaches its mini-warehouses in less than 20 hours after harvest from the farms, every day. He said the state-of-the-art infrastructure at each mini-warehouse maintains this freshness. This leads to consumers receiving the freshest fruit and vegetables each time, within 19 minutes of placing an order.

In less than a year, Dunzo Daily is growing at a rate of more than 100 per cent month-on-month and is expected to fulfil more than 200,000 orders per day by June. With launches planned in Delhi, Gurugram, Noida, and Hyderabad, Dunzo Daily will become a national player with over a 200 mini-warehouse strong network (adding to the network at a rate of one mini-warehouse a day since January) and a delivery partner fleet of over 30,000 across the country.

Quick commerce platform Zepto also recently raised $100 million in its Series C round at a valuation of $570 million.

Another rival, Swiggy has raised $700 million in an Invesco-led new funding, which, according to sources, has made the outfit a decacorn, almost doubling its valuation to $10.7 billion. This fund-raise will also enable Swiggy to accelerate growth on the core platform and make meaningful investment to grow Instamart, its quick commerce grocery service which remains well-positioned to continue to lead the emerging space and set to reach an annualised gross merchandise value run rate of $1 billion in the next three quarters.

Infosys Q4 net profit...

According to a Bloomberg poll, analysts were expecting Infosys to post revenues of ₹32,788 crore and a net profit of ₹6,000 crore.

Salil Parekh, CEO & MD, Infosys, however, said the deal momentum and the guidance that the company had provided, laid a strong foundation for FY23. "Infosys delivered the highest annual growth in a decade with broad-based performance driven by deeply differentiated digital and Infosys Cobalt-led Cloud capabilities, powered by 'One Infosys' approach. We continue to gain market share as a result of sustained client confidence in our ability to successfully navigate their digital journeys," he said.

The company also said it was moving its business out of Russia and was pursuing alternative options in view of the Ukraine conflict. "We work with no Russian clients, and the work we do is with a small number of global clients in Russia, for which we have started the transition," Parekh said.

The company has less than 100 employees in Russia, he added.

Growth for the quarter was broad-based. Digital as part of the revenue was 57 per cent for the fiscal, up 41.2 per cent YoY in constant currency (CC) terms. In terms of geography, growth was driven by Europe, which was up 28.3 per cent in CC terms, while the US grew 18.5 per cent. In terms of verticals, growth was led by BFSI (banking, financial services and insurance), retail, and communication, which grew at 14.1 per cent, 16.5 per cent, and 29.2 per cent, respectively, in CC terms. The company recommended a final dividend of ₹16 per share for FY22.

Infosys also disappointed on margins, which came in at 21.5 per cent for Q4, down from the 23.5 in Q3, because of supply-side constraints and higher subcontractor costs. For FY23, the company has projected operating margins in the range of 21-23 per cent. Here TCS managed to do a better job, with margins of 25.3 per cent in Q4.

Nilanjan Roy, CFO, Infosys, said that with strong growth, the company would need to make upfront investments, which would keep margins under pressure. "However, we plan to neutralise some of the impact through aggressive cost optimisation programmes and value-led pricing, driven by service and brand differentiation," he added.

"Infosys revenue/margin numbers were below our estimates for Q4....The revenue growth guidance for FY23E reflects another strong year, which means the demand environment continues to be strong on the back of healthy deal wins. However, Ebit margin guidance for FY23E, which is lower 100 bps on both higher and lower end of the guided FY22 band, reflects the continued cost pressures due to demand-supply mismatch," said a note from ICICI Research. The bigger concern at the company continues to be attrition, which jumped to 27.7 per cent in Q4, up from 25.5 per cent in Q3FY22. The company added 85,000 freshers in FY22 and plans to hire upwards of 50,000 in FY23.

Though the analysts were disappointed with the performance, the growth guidance of 13-15 per cent was positive. "Infosys headline numbers missed our estimates in a seasonally weak quarter, nonetheless the strength of demand is visible given strong net hiring, broad-based growth across industries, continued large client additions, and robust revenue growth guidance," said Ashish Dash of Sharekhan by BNP Paribas.
