

Infosys and Huawei Announce Global Partnership to Offer Cloud, Big Data and Communication Solutions

Berlin - September 18, 2014: Infosys, a global leader in technology, consulting and outsourcing, today announced a global partnership with Huawei, a leading global information and communication technology (ICT) solution provider. Through this partnership, the companies will jointly offer enterprise customers cloud, big data and communication solutions, along with other enterprise-oriented services which will combine Huawei's cloud infrastructure and global IT service expertise from Infosys.

Highlights of the new partnership:

- The companies will jointly develop IT solutions that combine Huawei's cloud infrastructure and extensive service expertise from Infosys. These solutions will target enterprise customers looking to modernize their operations by leveraging cloud infrastructure
- Both parties will build reference architectures and standardized solutions for big data platforms, on Huawei hardware infrastructure, for joint go-to-market efforts
- Huawei's customer contact technologies will be integrated with communication services from Infosys to offer enterprise customers a best-in-class communication experience like call center
- Huawei and Infosys will explore setting up a joint lab in China to enable better delivery in all areas of the partnership

In addition, Infosys and Huawei will further strengthen their existing partnership in the Huawei Business Process and Information Technology space.
