Rousseff future on hold as Brazilians take break from corruption crisis

Brazilia, Dec 25

BRAZILIA is becoming something of a ghost town after one of its most tumultuous years in recent memory.

The protagonists in this year's political crisis are fleeing the nation's capital to spend summer holidays in their home towns or on week-end getaways.

As the political crisis ebbs, the president and congressional leaders involved in impeachment and corruption scandals.

Supreme Court justices until February 2. Then, the second week of February, they are scheduled to take more time off for Carnival celebrations.

Everyone needs a break, said Dircio Frey, an advisor to the president's chief of staff.

Brazil's political and economic crisis has picked up since late November, when the lower house opened impeachment proceedings.

The two firms have the best track record of implementing technology and will be able to successfully learn from new entrants in payments, blockchain and automated investing, said Brian Farn, an Autonomous Research partner who ran the research firm's survey this month.

Eighty-five percent of the 150 securities and investment professionals surveyed expect a mix of winners and losers, with 14% thought banks face a significant threat.

Banks are rushing to offer more technology-driven services, including peer-to-peer payments and same-day approval of business loans, so new competitors don't steal their customers.

JPMorgan and Goldman Sachs, the two banks that already produce the most revenue from investment banking and trading worldwide, were picked as the biggest winners along with Citic and Mastercard.

Within a month, we had an option on the Bug Racer, which is very fast. Said Robert Schwartzman, the president of Pace Development Group, who created the idea with his business partner.

Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff

Voting on whether to try Rousseff in Congress on charges she broke the budget law, probably won't be made until March

The hells of Congress are unusually quiet. The Rousseff administration didn't want it this way. It had been pushing Congress to forge its recess and continue work on impeachment that she would put an end to the political uncertainty that has helped push business confidence to near-record lows and deepen an economic recession.

Even though it will now have to wait, the administration is heading into 2016 on a more hopeful note following a series of victories in recent days.

The Supreme Court on December 17 made a ruling on impeachment that establishes procedures that could tip the balance in favor of the president.

Now traffic flows freely and parking in the notoriously crowded city center is abundant as many civil servants abandon Brasília.

DoE SE: As Gerry Conry, a senior design manager at Mattel, cheerfully leads a live cricket to the driver's seat of a new toy car, the cricket probably did not have time to wonder how it had gotten to this point.

Conry had consulted an entomologist for the first time in his history to develop a battery-operated racer with a compartment for a cricket, whose movements "drive" the car — sometimes in walls and chairs.

Mattel may be more closely associated with Barbie than bugs, but the racer fits into Mattel's efforts to prove that it can be as nimble and tech-savvy as its competitors.

"That's a really good example of something that you just find like 'What a little bit of work,'" said Susie Lecker, the executive vice president and chief brand officer of Toys R Us, a new division of Mattel that developed the Bug Racer as part of its mandate to fast-track promising, experimental products.

Within a month, we had an option on the Bug Racer, which is very fast. Said Robert Schwartzman, the president of Pace Development Group, who created the idea with his business partner.

the opposition's marginal arguments for her ouster.

Rousseff has called a cabinet meeting for Tuesday to discuss infrastructure projects, long-term lending and caps on pension spending, in a sign that the government is seeking to refocus attention on the economy following weeks of fighting with Congress.

The executive branch doesn't have a choice, said Justice Minister Jose Eduardo Cardozo. "Each ministry has its priorities, spelled out by the president."

Most Brazilians don't have much faith in legislators and return to work Monday concerned about surging consumer prices and rising unemployment.

The political crisis and corruption scandal hit far from their minds either. One of the most law-abiding figures emerging in the run-up to Carnival is that of a federal police agent who led arrests of high-profile businessmen and politicians.

Although the hole left by Disney Princess may be enormous, Mattel has the rights to a number of other lucrative entertainment properties: Disney's next Toy Story film, several DC Comics' female superheroes becoming "Batman vs Superman: Dawn of Justice" movie. Sinclair is also confident in Mattel's chances of winning the rights to Disney's third installment of "Cars."

Investors have nevertheless expressed concerns about the company's core business.

That business includes Barbie and Fisher-Price, staples that has struggled in recent years to find a mainstay. In 2015, retail sales of Barbie and Fisher-Price fell 18%.

India deal unlikely to secure Toshiba's lofty nuclear plans

Tokyo Dec 28: Japan's Toshiba may need to curb its ambitions in nuclear power even as it looks set to win a deal in India, battling both competition from emerging market rivals and the impact of its own deteriorating finances, industry experts said.

Several Indian government officials told Reuters earlier this month that the country expects to seal a contract with Toshiba's US nuclear unit Westinghouse to build six nuclear reactors in the first half of next year.

The deal, estimated to be worth as much as $3 billion per reactor, is a blessing for Toshiba as the laptop-to-nuclear conglomerate overhails its global marketing campaign.

Yet industry experts say it is far from securing its goal of building 60 reactors over the next 15 years — an ambitious plan announced in November but even more ambitious than its October bid for the 2011 Fukushima disaster that spurred a nuclear phase-out among development nations such as Germany.

Toshiba will beat out cheaper manufacturers vying for contracts in emerging countries such as China, India and Turkey. "I expect Russia and China to eventually dominate the nuclear market," Hideo Kaneta, nuclear expert at Japan's Toyota Research Institute, said.

Toshiba's deteriorating capital base, laid bare in recent financial reports after years of staggered profits, also means the company lacks the financial flexibility often required to make nuclear reactors viable.

Los Angeles, Dec 28: Star Wars: The Force Awakens showed signs of flagging over Christmas weekend, but still managed to gross $1.1 billion worldwide.

Los Angeles, Dec 28: Star Wars: The Force Awakens showed signs of flagging over Christmas weekend, but still managed to gross $1.1 billion worldwide.

Reuters reported earlier this month that Toshiba was asking Japanese financial institutions to help fund the NuGen UK nuclear project in north-west England.

The scandal has made it more difficult for Toshiba to take on the planned share of the building costs by itself, the sources said.

Mostly, it has recently downgraded the company's debt rating to junk status and the Tokyo Stock Exchange has placed Toshiba stocks in a special "watch" category to see whether it can improve internal controls.

Force Awakens hopes to surpass as the highest-grossing film in history. Despite the lull surrounding the return of the Jedi, a few films managed to score with publicists' best buyers.

Goldman Sachs and JPMorgan the tech winners

New York, Dec 28: Goldman Sachs and JPMorgan Chase will probably benefit most from the coming wave of financial technology disruption, rather than being supplanted by startups driving the change, according to an Autonomous Research survey.

The two firms have the best track record of implementing technology and will be able to successfully learn from new entrants in payments, blockchain and automated investing, said Brian Farn, an Autonomous Research partner who ran the research firm's survey this month.

Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff

November, when the lower house opened impeachment proceedings against Rousseff, Brazil lost its investment-grade status and senatorial billions were arrested as part of a corruption probe. Democrats in Brasilia flared. Legislators engaged in shoving matches to settle their differences and indigenous groups chanted on the roof of Congress in part to demand the ouster of the lower house speaker, who faces an ethics probe.

Now traffic flows freely and parking in the notoriously crowded city center is abundant as many civil servants abandon Brasilia. The halls of Congress are unusually quiet.

Star Wars crosses $1 bn mark global box office

Los Angeles, Dec 25

Star Wars: The Force Awakens showed few signs of flagging over Christmas weekend, barreling past the $1-billion mark globally at a faster clip than any film in history.

It's becoming old hat to recount the various ways that the seventh film in the science-fiction fantasy is vaporizing records, but familiar or not, The Force Awakens once again ground down high-water marks over the holidays, racking up $133.5 million domestically.

That represents both the biggest Christmas holiday result and the best second weekend for a film in history. Domestically, The Force Awakens has grossed a mammoth $546 million worldwide that figure is nearly $1 billion. The Star Wars sequel crossed $1 billion in twelve days, surpassing it took the previous record-holder, Jurassic World, 13 days to accomplish. The three-day holiday should also rank as the biggest Christmas weekend overall in history, beating the $489.8 million in 2009, which saw the launch of Sherlock Holmes and the second weekend of Avatar; the box office titan that The Force Awakens hopes to surpass as the highest grossing film in history. Despite the honour surrounding the return of the Jedi, a few films managed to score with yuletide ticket buyers.

Paramount reunited The Other Guys stars Will Ferrell and Mark Wahlberg in the comedy Daddy's Home with strong results. The look at a stepfather's attempts to outshine his wife's stud of a first husband, came in second with strong $38.8 million from 3,271 theaters. That was far above projections which had the picture opening in the $30 million range. Daddy's Home carries a $50 million budget.

Fox also scored with Joy, a rag-tag biopic about the creator of the Miracle Max, that earned $17.5 million from 3,296 theaters. The $50 million film reunites the Silver Linings Playbook team of Jennifer Lawrence, Robert De Niro, and Bradley Cooper with director David O. Russell. It is expected to be a leading Oscar contender.

But Fast Break, a remake of the 1961 Kathryn Bigelow cult favorite, wiped out. The $105 million action flick eked out $10.2 million from 4,910 venues.

New York, Dec 28: Goldman Sachs and JPMorgan Chase will probably benefit most from the continuing wave of financial technology disruption, rather than being supplanted by startups driving the change, according to an Autonomous Research survey.

The two firms have the best track record of implementing technology, and will be able to successfully learn from new entrants in payments, blockchain and automated investing, said Brian Poran, an Autonomous Research partner who ran the research firm's survey this month. Eighty-five percent of the 100 executives and investors predicted sectoral disruption or a mix of winners and losers, while 14% thought banks face a significant threat. "Technology doesn't move as fast as people think," Poran said in an interview. "The pace of change will be slow enough that the traditional players can get ahead of it through banking, investing in startups, and acquire them before they die."

New York, Dec 22: Goldman Sachs and JPMorgan Chase will probably benefit most from the coming wave of financial technology disruption, rather than being upstaged by startups, according to an Autonomous Research survey.

The two firms have the best track record of implementing technology and will be able to successfully learn from competitors in payments, blockchain and automated investing, said Brian Furan, an Autonomous Research partner who ran the research firm's survey this month. Eighty-five percent of the 150 executives and investors polled ranked the two banks a mix of winners and losers, while 14% thought banks face a significant threat. "Technology doesn't move as fast as people think," Furan said in an interview. "They've changed so much so fast that it's hard to keep up."

Banks are rushing to offer more technology-driven services, including peer-to-peer payments and socially approved business loans, so new competitors don't steal their customers. Bank of America's Chief Executive Officer, Brian Moynihan, will unveil an automated investment product next year, people with knowledge of the plans said in November.

Banks have cited the need to learn from other industries that got upended by Silicon Valley disruptors. In November, Moynihan told analysts that if they bundle the tech transition and new entrants become trusted intermediaries, "it may allow part of our industry to be forever subsumed by technology."

JPMorgan and Goldman Sachs, the two banks that already produce the most revenue from investment banking and trading worldwide, were picked as the biggest winners along with Visa and Mastercard as mobile payments become more commonplace and blockchain technology lowers costs in many institutional businesses, according to the survey.

Mattel takes a risk, with Barbie and Bugs

Dec 22: As Gerry Conroy, a senior design manager at Mattel, cheerfully led a live cricket into the driver's seat of a new toy car, the cricket probably did not have time to wonder how it had ended up in this point.

Conroy explained how the company had consulted an entomologist for the first time in its history to develop a battery-operated vehicle with a compartment for a cricket, whose movements "drive" the car — sometimes in a walk and climb.

Within a month, we had an option on the Bug Racer, which is very fast, said Robert Schwartzman, the president of Pace Development Group, who created the idea with his business partner holiday season: the interactive talking Hello Barbie doll and View-Master, a decades-old 3-D brand that Mattel reimagined as a virtual reality goggles.

"It may be a bit smaller, but it's the crickets that we're focusing on," Christopher A. Sinclair, Mattel's chief executive, said in an interview at the company's headquarters in El Segundo, Calif.

Sinclair took over after the abrupt resignation of his predecessor, Bryan G. Stockton, in January. He quickly started mending fences, importantly with Disney, which had dropped Mattel as a partner for its Disney Princess dolls, one of its most lucrative licensing deals. And he built bridges to outside toy inventors in search of fresh ideas because, Mr. Sinclair said, the company had become too "insular."

That includes coming back to well-known characters like the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and new shows like Netflix's "Dinotrix."

Although the hole left by Disney Princess may be enormous, Mattel has the right number of other franchises to stimulate properties: Disney's Toy Story, Pixar's Cars, DC Comics' Batman vs Superman: Dawn of Justice. Sinclair is also confident in Mattel's chances of winning the rights to Disney's third installment of "Cars."

Investors have nevertheless expressed concerns about the company's core business. That business includes Barbie and Fisher-Price, Mattel's two main brands. Barbie has largely fallen to Richard Dickson, who returned to Mattel last year after spending several years as a top clothing company executive and now serves as Mattel's president and chief operating officer.

India deal unlikely to secure Toshiba's lofty nuclear plans

Tokyo Dec 22: Japan's Toshiba may need to curb its ambitions in nuclear power even as it looks set to win a deal in India, battling both competition from emerging markets and the impact of its own deteriorating finances, industry experts said.

A senior Indian government official told Reuters earlier this month that the country expects to seal a contract with Toshiba's US nuclear unit Westinghouse to build six nuclear reactors in the first half of next year. The deal, estimated to be worth as much as $2 billion per reactor, is a blessing for Toshiba as the laptop-to-nuclear conglomerate seeks to diversify its loss-making consumer electronics division in the wake of a $1.3 billion book-keeping scandal.

Yet industry experts say it is far from securing its goal of building 60 reactors over the next 15 years — an ambitious plan announced in November and even more bullish than its outlook before the 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster that spurred a nuclear phase-out among developed nations such as Germany. Moreover, they say Russia and China are beefing up efforts to export their own reactors with lower prices.

In 2013, Toshiba lost Russia's Rosatom in supplying Finland's Pynnovo power plant project, and analysts say they's little assurance Toshiba will beat out cheaper manufacturers vying for contracts in emerging countries such as China, India and Turkey. "I expect Russia and China to eventually dominate the nuclear market," said Hiroko Kubota, nuclear expert at Japan's Topica Research Institute said.

"Their reactors are significantly price competitive," he noted. Toshiba's deteriorating capital base, laid bare in recent financial reports after years of exaggerated profits, also means the company lacks the financial flexibility often required of nuclear reactor suppliers. Reuters reported last month that Toshiba was asking Japanese financial institutions to help fund the NuGen UK nuclear project in northern England.

The scandal has made it more difficult for Toshiba to take on its planned share of the building costs by itself, the sources said. Moody's also recently downgraded the company's debt rating to junk status, and the Tokyo Stock Exchange has placed Toshiba's stocks in a special "watch" category to see whether it can improve internal controls. Both moves make it difficult for the company to raise funding through debt or new shares.

That also leaves Toshiba at a disadvantage to rivals such as Hitachi. An executive at Hitachi said massive bids for reactor component suppliers were increasingly expected to submit funding proposals along with bids for reactor projects. "Nowadays, nuclear projects must be accompanied by financing plans," the executive said.

Yet Toshiba insiders are upbeat, saying they expect to win more bids for reactor component suppliers were increasingly expected to submit funding proposals along with bids for reactor projects. "Nowadays, nuclear projects must be accompanied by financing plans," the executive said.

'Star Wars' crosses $1 bn globally at record pace

Los Angeles, Dec 22: Star Wars: The Force Awakens showed few signs of lagging over Christmas weekend, but it's still on track to cross the $1-billion mark globally at a faster clip than any film in history.

It's becoming old hat to recount the various ways that the sci-fi fantasy is regarding records, but familiar or not, The Force Awakens once again ground down high-water marks over the holidays, racking up $153 million domestically.

Forc Awakens has crossed the $1 billion mark in history. The Force Awakens has crossed a monumental $544 million worldwide, that figure is nearly $1 billion in twelve days, something it took the previous record-holder, Jurassic World, 13 days to accomplish. The three-day holiday should also rank as biggest Christmas weekend opening in history, beating the $268.5 million in 2008, which saw the launch of Star Trek: Holmes and the second weekend of Avatar, the box office titan that The

Rousseff govt in limbo as Brazilians take break from corruption crisis

Brazilia, Dec 22

BRASILIA is becoming something of a ghost town over the most tumultuous years in recent memory.

The protagonists in this year's political crisis are fleeing the nation's capital to spend Christmas holidays in their home towns or seek getaways from the city. The president and congressional leaders embroiled in impeachment and corruption scandals.

Supreme Court justices and legislators are on recess until February 2. Then in the second week of February, they are scheduled to take more time off for Carnival celebrations. That means some important decisions, such as voting on whether to try President Dilma Rousseff in Congress on charges she broke the budget law, probably won't be made until March, according to parliament consulting firm Eurasia Group.

"Everyone needs a break," said Durciso Perondi, a lower house deputy for the PMDB party and one of Rousseff's most vocal critics. "It's been an intense year."

Brazil's political and economic crisis has pushed up since last

Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff

November, when the lower house opened impeachment proceedings against Rousseff. Brazil lost its investment-grade status, and a senator and billionaire banker were arrested as part of a corruption probe. Tens of thousands of protesters took to the streets in support of Rousseff. Legislators suggested in lobbying matches to settle their differences and indigenous groups claimed on the roof of Congress in part to demand the ouster of the lower house speaker, who faces an ethics probe.

New traffic flows freely and parking in the notoriously overcrowded center is abundant as many civil servants abandon Brasília. The halls of Congress are unusually quiet. The Rousseff administration didn't want it this way. It had been pushing Congress to forgo its recess and continue working, in hopes lawmakers would put an end to the political uncertainty that has helped push business confidence to near-record lows and deepen an economic recession.

Even though it will now have to wait, the administration is heading into 2016 on a more hopeful note following a series of victories in recent days.

The Supreme Court on December 17 made a ruling on impeachment that establishes procedures that could tip the balance in favor of the president. A senior legislator on the lower house budget committee last week said Congress ought to approve Rousseff's 2014 accounts, a move that would undermine the opposition's main arguments for her ouster.

Rousseff has called a cabinet meeting for Tuesday to discuss infrastructure projects, long-term lending and caps on pension spending, in a sign that the government is seeking to refocus its attention on the economy following weeks of fighting with Congress.

"The executive branch doesn't have a recess," said Justice Minister Jose Eduardo Cardozo. "Each ministry has its priorities, spelled out by the president."

"Most Brazilians don't have as many holidays as legislators and return to work Monday concerned about rising consumer prices and surging unemployment.

The political crisis and corruption scandal isn't far from their minds either. One of the most iconic figures emerging in the run-up to Carnival is that of a federal police agent who led arrests of high-profile businessmen and politicians. A samba march starting the night went viral on YouTube, and designers are molding masks with his image in time for Carnival costume parties.

"I'm in trouble," go the lyrics to the samba song, adding: "The guy from the Federal police is knocking on my door."

Star Wars crosses $1 bn mark global box office

Los Angeles, Dec 22: Star Wars: The Force Awakens showed few signs of flagging over Christmas weekend, barreling past the $1-billion mark globally at a faster clip than any film in history.

It's becoming old hat to recount the various ways that the seventh film in the science-fiction fantasy is vaporizing records, but familiar or not, The Force Awakens once again ground down high-water marks over the holidays, raking up $163.5 million domestically.

That represents both the biggest Christmas holiday result and the best second weekend for a film in history. Domestically, The Force Awakens has grossed a mammoth $644.6 million. Worldwide that figure is nearly $1.1 billion. The Star Wars sequel crossed $1 billion in twelve days, something it took the previous record-holder, Jurassic World, 13 days to accomplish. The three-day holiday should also rank as biggest Christmas weekend overall in history, beating the $289.5 million in 2008, which saw the launch of Sherlock Holmes and the second weekend of Avatar, the box office titan that The Force Awakens hopes to surpass as the highest-grossing film in history. Despite the favour surrounding the return of the Jedi, a few films managed to score with yuletide ticket buyers.

Paramount reunited The Other Guys stars Will Ferrell and Mark Wahlberg in the comedy Daddy's Home with strong results. The look at a stepfather's attempts to outshine his wife's stud of a first husband, came in second with a strong $38.8 million from 2,271 theaters. That was followed by predictions which had the turn-of-year in the $30-million range, Daddy's Home carries a $40 million budget.

Fox also scored with Jay & the Silent Bob, a biopic about the creator of the MTV show, but it was the film's $17.5 million from 2,896 theaters. The $60 million film re-unites the Silver Linings Playbook team of Jennifer Lawrence, Robert De Niro, and Bradley Cooper with director David O. Russell. It is expected to be a leading Oscar contender.

But Polar Break, a remake of the 1993 Kathryn Bigelow hit, flopped, wiping out 'The $106 million action flick set on $10.2 million from 2,910 venues.
