MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

A. BUSINESS SEGMENT –TEXTILES:

Industry Structure & Development:

The industry has had a difficult year which has seen demand as well as fabric prices remain at a very low level. A bumper cotton crop has seen its prices falling below the Minimum Support Price (MSP) set by the Government due to reduction in exports and lack of domestic demand by textile mills. Export demand has also weakened through the course of the year as the world saw China unload its hoarded cotton stocks, bringing global fabric prices down. Volatility in the foreign exchange rates has affected export sales.

The commoditized nature of the textile industry is largely due to many players trying to compete in the same product and market segments. Production capacities are steadily increasing leading to greater availability of the same products, not allowing prices to rise with the rising cost of other inputs such as power, labour and other resources.

In our opinion, the only sustainable road to success lies in the innovation of products as well as marketing. As we have mentioned before, the company's strategy is to create a niche for its existing products as well as focus on new product developments which we hope will add considerable value to the textile operation of the company.

Opportunities and Threats:

The company is exploring several niche product areas where there are opportunities, such as some home textile products, and using of value added fibers. In the recently completed expansion, we have focused on processing high value products which can help set us apart from our competition.

Since the company's operations are centred in Maharashtra, the increasing cost of inputs such as power and fuel remain its largest threats. Continuous efforts towards efficient manufacturing and saving of power costs will aid us to mitigate part of these threats. Import policy for fabrics from competing countries as well as the exchange rates also continue to pose a threat to the profitability of our textile operation. Our efforts to develop and market unique products should be an important factor in overcoming these threats.

Risks and Concerns:

Volatility in raw material costs particularly in cotton continues to remain a significant concern. The company has a fairly strong procurement strategy which helps us compete in the domestic markets. However, sales to International markets are directly affected by India's cotton pricing and policy.

The Indian governments policies towards the textile industry have been fairly lackluster in recent years and this too continues to be a concern if companies in India are to compete on the global stage. Focus on value addition as opposed to size is the way we see best to overcome these concerns.

Retaining a skilled and talented workforce in an industry like textiles is also a major challenge for any company in the space.

Outlook:

The future outlook for the Company looks fairly positive. Establishing strong relationships with our stakeholders and developing unique and value added products remain the major focus areas for the company. The Indian market is yet to see an advent in niche textile products and we believe that the demand for such products will grow in the future. We are keeping a keen eye on these areas and have already begun some R&D activities for niche products we believe will be growing in volumes.

The company has decided to focus on value instead of size which will help it remain relevant and profitable in the years to come.

B. BUSINESS SEGMENT – ENGINEERING UNIT:

Industry Structure and Development:

Due to the slow demand faced by the textile industry, the textile machine market has remained stagnant as purchasing decisions were postponed. There seems to be a growth in the demand for indigenous calendaring machines which added some volume to the calendaring roll business. The Steel Industry continues to show good promise, but the sales cycle is long and difficult as purchasing locally manufactured non-woven rolls represents a change of behaviour for the customers. The paper industry remains stable, and increased volumes may come with successful product innovation.

Rollers will remain an integral part of continuous manufacturing processes, and as Indian industry grows, the roll market will follow. The Company will continue to look for new areas of business within this larger roll market.

Opportunities and Threats:

The Company will continue to focus on the Steel industry with its non-woven rolls, as this market is under-penetrated and offers good potential for growth in this value-added product line.

In order to do so, there will be much effort required to build relationships with these customers, and find a better way both to make initial sales and find other applications for the product in the plants of existing customers.

The Company has developed a high-strength roller for use in industries that have very demanding applications, and have successfully supplied this product to the thin film manufacturing industry. This new technology and product line will certainly have many applications across industries, and the Company will make a sustained effort to identify these opportunities.

In a small and largely unorganised market, the entry of small competitors will affect the sales of the Company due to price competition. However, the Company continues to differentiate its products through quality and performance to remain the supplier of choice for its customers.

Risks and Concerns:

Volatility of the fortunes of the textile industry will continue to determine the demand for a large part of the Company's roll business. Diversifying the product line and servicing other industries will help the Company achieve stable sales without such dependence on a single industry.

Raw material prices are a critical variable for our products, as a substantial part of the raw material is being imported from few key suppliers. It is necessary for the company to review raw material suppliers often and to find the best material at the best price to ensure sustainability in the market.

Outlook:

The main focus continues to be on developing new proprietary products that will both offer a much-needed solution for customers while insulating the Company from price competition from new market entrants. The Company will also strive to improve service to existing customers by developing products that will make their manufacturing processes more efficient by providing quality improvements and cost reduction.

C. BUSINESS SEGMENT – COMPOSITES:

Industry Structure & Development:

During the first half of the year, excess inventories built up in the system and weak liquidity had a negative effect on supplies to key customers. A more certain economic environment coupled with a resumption of several stalled projects and indigenization programs ensured a more robust growth during the second half of the year. The green shoots of growth have only started to appear now and we see this trend accelerating in the coming year.

Issues of relatively low competence and capability in processing Composites still affect various end use industries, and has resulted in volume growth being relatively muted. The fact that advanced textiles, intermediates, and technologies are largely available only outside of India has not allowed a strong domestic market to emerge. During the year, key end use markets such as Defense & Aerospace still remained reliant on imports to meet a large percentage of their demand. The company has focused its efforts on spreading awareness about substituting imports with our products available locally which has helped us partner with key customers on projects with high volume/margin growth.

During the year the company has worked on building competence and relationships with key stakeholders through the value chain. We are now in a much better position than before to capitalize on the opportunities available for growth globally. Domestic and international markets continue to show a strong demand for quality cost competitive products and solutions both of which we have been focused on steadfastly.

In order to align our Brand with our Strategy the company has also decided to rebrand the composites business as "Hindoostan Composites Solutions" thus signalling our shift from being only an intermediate material manufacturer to a complete solution provider.

Opportunities and Threats:

Sound strategy to further penetrate key markets such as Defense and Aerospace remain the dominant opportunity for the company. We have established relationships with key end users in these high growth markets and have begun initial business with them. We expect to capitalize on this start and move to becoming sole suppliers to these key customers. This process is well underway as evidenced by the pickup in sales towards the end of the last quarter.

Ongoing technological advancements in both areas of production and R&D have put us in an exceptionally strong position locally, and will also continue to drive our foray into international markets with significant improvement to existing product lines as well as the introduction of new products. Our Karad unit is expected to be ISO certified in the coming year and we continue to add material qualification and testing facilities at our R&D centre which should further help get us closer to fulfilling our customers needs.

Imports from established global players still continue to be the primary threat to our business. A few Indian companies have also announced their foray in the space with aggressive investments and planned capacity additions, but these are yet to materialize.

That said, we continue to carefully monitor competitive activities and align our strategies to stay ahead of the curve. On the regulatory front, uncertainly on the availability of certain critical raw materials due to license restrictions remains a concern. This has a detrimental effect on certain product development activities that the company might intend to undertake.

Risks and Concerns:

Low liquidity remains a major concern for the coming year. Large multinationals as well as smaller composite players continue to have issues with working capital and cash flows. This tends to slow down projects and has ripple effect through the value chain. With easing credit and improving manufacturing growth, we are hopeful that this situation will stabilize in the coming year.

Capacity addition and limited processing capabilities is another inherent concern. India continues to be near the bottom in terms of per capita composites consumption as well composites manufacturing capacity. This limits the type and volume of products that can be processed domestically which in turn has caused stagnation in certain end use markets. However, this means that the potential of future growth is large.

To mitigate these risks the company has focused on establishing its own credit policy which has allowed us to improve our payment cycles and collections from customers. On the processing side, the company will continue to look at opportunistic value added manufacturing activities to supplement our existing products and markets.

Outlook:

Global and domestic outlook for the composites market continues to be extremely positive. Forecasts suggest the Indian composites market will hit US $1.8 billion by 2017 and grow at a CAGR of 20%. Sufficient evidence exists in key end use markets such as Defense, Aerospace, Automotive and Wind Energy that the forecast should be easily achievable. Recent announcements by global composites majors and investments by Indian MNC's into composite manufacturing and capacity building in India argues well for the growth and development of this market.

On the macro level - easing credit, improving sentiment, stable economic environment and increasing per capita incomes should help improve the demand for composite products.

Given the wide variety of options available to us in the current ecosystem ensuring a strong sustainable strategy for growth and development becomes extremely critical. The focus for the future will be on strengthening our position in the composite market and augmenting this growth by looking at developing niche composite components. Ensuring we attain profitability without compromising on strategy and direction will be the guiding principle of our development.

D. REVIEW AND ANALYSIS:

Financial Performance:

During the year under review, the financial performance of the Company has been affected mainly on account of reduced market demand and price pressure. The Company continues to focus on its core products as well as on new product developments and strong operational principles to sustain its growth. Flexibility to adapt quickly and strategic sale/purchase will be a key to success in volatile scenarios.

During the year under review, Revenue from Operations is increased to ₹153.77 crores from ₹146.62 crores in the Previous Year. The segment wise details are as under:

₹in crores

Segment	Current Year	Previous Year
Textiles	139.51	135.21
Engineering	9.26	9.41
Composite	5.00	2.00
TOTAL	153.77	146.62

The Export turnover on FOB basis is ₹26.76 crores as against ₹28.60 crores in the previous year.

Operational margins in Textile unit have been down mainly on account of lack of domestic demand and rising input cost.

The Engineering business although topline remain unchanged, the profitability up slightly on account of favourable demand and better product-mix.

Topline growth was good and expected to continued for Composite unit. The company has focused its efforts to partner with some key customers on projects with high volume/margin for growth.

Profitability:

During the year under review, the Profit before Depreciation, Interest and Tax has decreased at ₹ 4.76 crores in the current year as compared to ₹ 11.55 crores in the previous year. The Company has incurred the loss of ₹ 6.89 crores as compared to profit of ₹ 5.18 crores in the Previous Year.
