Plastics bags consumption for cement storage rose steadily over the quarter of the last decade due to increase in demand for packaged cement. India with a large number of pipeline infrastructure projects has sustained a favourable growth in infra related areas even in times of economic recession, resulting in steady increasing demand for plastic packing material.

(ii) FERTILIZER PACKING:

Fertilizer industry provides a rich market for plastic woven sacks. In case of composite fertilizers, the Jute packing has bœen totally replaced by high density polythene bags whereas incase of urea only 80% is replacœd because of obstacle posed by the government regulation.

(iii) FOOD GRAINS:

Food grain packing is a big business in India, as nearly 76% of the population is directly dependant on agriculture and related industries. Steadily decline in jute production is resulting in increased demand for plastics packaging of food grains. It is estimated that 337 MMT of food grains will be produced by 2011-12 resulting in a heavy demand for plastics packaging.

5. Geographical Disadvantages.
6. International labor and Environmental Laws.
7. To balance the demand and supply.
8. To make balance between price and quality.
