The announcement of Urjit Patel as the new Governor of the Bank of India further matched the 7-month streak following the election of Prime Minister Modi in May 2014.

Despite emerging indications of a relative slowdown in the economy, the approval of the Goods and Services Tax Bill on 3rd August was welcomed by the market. Unsurprisingly, perhaps, cyclical sectors benefited - the S&P BSE Consumer Discretionary Goods and Services and the S&P BSE Energy gained 2.91% and 4.34%, respectively, over the month.

The best performing sector was the S&P BSE Basic Materials, returning 6.17% in August; the index’s total return of 40.93% since the turn of the year is the best on record.

The S&P BSE India Infrastructure’s 5.83% monthly return meant it was the best performing equity strategy index, narrowly beating the S&P BSE Enhanced Value -1.37% and S&P BSE Momentum, which returned 5.51% and 5.27%, respectively. The S&P BSE 10 Yr Sovereign Bond Index was the worst performing index, falling -0.82%.

Consumer inflation rose to 6.08% for July, nearing the upper end of the Reserve Bank’s target and prompting Governor Rajan to offer guidance that interest rate cuts will require inflation to fall. Despite this, every fixed income index gained in August.

The S&P BSE IPO and the S&P BSE Sensex Inverse Daily were the only strategies in red this month, returning -0.44% and -4.18%, respectively. The S&P BSE SENSEX rose 1.54% in August, completing its 6th consecutive monthly gain and finishing on a 1-year high. Further gains in September would match the 7-month streak following the election of Prime Minister Modi in May 2014.
