SIA Bets On Vistara To Get More Transit Passengers from India

MihirMishra@timesg

New Delhi: Singapore Airlines (SIA) is expected to start flying transit passengers from India when Vistara, a joint venture between Singapore Airlines and Tata Air, starts flying international, a top source said.

Currently, about 40% of the total passengers on SIA are transit passengers from India.

"Yes. That will definitely increase the number of transit passengers from India," said a senior airline manager for India, told ET, who said the airline's possible gain from Vistara's international services from May. Singapore Airlines has already started flying to India from its early destinations for the India market.

"I think when they start flying to India, it will be a win-win situation for both of us," he said.

"When you have more capacity and more flights to Singapore definitely it would be a win-win situation," he said.

Vistara, a 51:49 joint venture between Singapore Airlines and SIA, said it would launch international services in the second half of 2018, and achieve a significant milestone for that — 20 aircraft.

The airline also informed the aviation ministry that it would like to fly international from May 2018, the first year itself.

"We will be getting our 18th and 19th aircraft will join us in the second half of 2018, and we will be becoming a 22-aircraft fleet," he said.

we will be launching international operations from May 2018," Vistara chief executive Les Lim said.

As of now, Vistara and SIA share the same terminal and airport lounge access. Singapore Airlines has already started flying to India from its early destinations for the India market.

"On 10 routes, we have placed our code on us too," Lim said.

Lim said he would like Vistara to have a strong domestic network as well, similar to Singapore Airlines compared with other local airlines.
