Hero Electric's Chennai Eco Motors continues to see growth in sales

Coimbatore, Feb 26: India's Largest Electric two-wheeler company, Hero Electric has always ensured its partners have grown with it despite all odds. The company today announced that its Chennai Eco Motors dealership in Chennai, Tamil Nadu, was among the top dealerships for the region registering over 40+ units sold per month during the Post-COVID unlock. The dealership also reported that the company's continuous efforts in making the hybrid sales model has reaped rewards for them when the future looked bleak. Coupled with its innovative training programs for their dealers, the company's dealerships across the country have benefitted by registering sales bettering their pre-COVID performances.

Calling their partnership with Hero one of their best decision, the dealership shared how understanding the long term effects of climate change and the necessity of shifting to a cleaner mode of transport was one of the key reasons that encouraged them to set up a dealership of Electric Vehicles.

Commenting on their journey with

Hero Electric, Mrs. Bhagyajeevanathan from Chennai Eco Motors said, "As a dealer of Hero Electric, I have always felt privileged to have associated with a brand that not only stands for commitment, trust and support but also walks the talk when it comes to implementing it. The entire team including Mr. Munjal, Mr. Gill and regional teams have always thought about us as a family and taken our recommendations positively and helped us grow. This kind of support helps us grow and also motivates us to work harder and honor their vision to transform the country to a cleaner, greener mobility solution."

Sedition and Ghostly Talk..!

It's been whispered that ghosts of yesterday can mix with the nocturnal spirits of today, as no time bar separates them in the supernatural realms, which is why in the other worldly bar that phantom souls frequent, the late Winston Churchill walked across the spooky floor to join the late Thomas Babington Macaulay for a ghostly drink. "What are you grinning about Thomas?" he asked lightly, dropping the title of 'Sir' which Macaulay would have otherwise insisted be added to his name, but not so for the great Churchill.

"Ah Winston, how are you, and I do hope you're enjoying the spirits here!"

"Enjoying imbibing them and keeping company with them!" guffawed Sir Winston. "But coming back to you, I saw you frowning to yourself and wondered what was bothering you ole chap? You thinking of something of your days on earth?"

"As a matter of fact, India!" said Macaulay.

"Fancy that," said Churchill as perched himself on the club chair and pulled out a cigar, "And what about that great jewel of our crown where you thinking about?" "About the sedition law I got passed in 1870!" said Macaulay with a frown, as he shooed away the cigar smoke that floated towards him.

"If my memory serves me right, section 124A of the Indian Penal Code!" said Churchill.

"You got a good memory Winston," said Macaulay grudgingly. "Considering I used the law many times as a cabinet minister to imprison Gandhi and what's his name..."

"Nehru!" said Macaulay. "Yeah Nehru, quite a guy huh, that Jawaharlal, never thought them Indians could be so charming!"

"Well, our good Mountbatten found out a bit late didn't he, at least his Edwina did!"

They both laughed, and Churchill continued, "What about the sedition law you introduced to jail Indians who rebelled against us English?"

"They're still using it!" said Macaulay angrily.

"You must be joking!" said Churchill, "But we left them over seventy years ago?"

"Yeah, but the law didn't leave with us!" said Macaulay quietly, "It's still there and used conveniently by every government, not to book those who incite violence against the state, but to imprison anyone who doesn't agree with the policies of an existing government!"

"Well, well!" muttered Churchill as he blew a wad of smoke onto the senior ghost.

"Well what?" asked Macaulay. "I did tell everybody they were not ready for freedom or democracy!" said Churchill smugly.

"Yes, you did, while I spent every year there as Governor, bringing in education so they would ultimately be ready for a freedom, I knew they would get someday!"

"Looks like it's not the education you gave them that's working Macaulay, but the draconian law you taught them to use," said Winston Churchill wickedly as the great late Lord Thomas Babington Macaulay coughed violently inhaling the ghostly cigar smoke blown intentionally in his direction...!

Opening up of bond market retail investors will enable channelising of household savings

Chennai, Feb 26: The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) has allowed direct participation by retail investors in government bonds. With this move, India joins the select few countries that have given access to retail investors on its trading platform, which is currently accessible to institutions such as banks, insurance companies, foreign investors and pension funds.

According to Sameer Narang, Chief Economist, Bank of Baroda, "In the Indian G-sec market, trading is skewed in favour of central government securities (77% of volume). Within this, top-3 securities accounted for almost 50% of volume. These were securities with maturities upwards of 10 years. Only 5% of securities traded had maturity of less than 3 years. Another 23% of securities traded had maturity ranging from 3 to 7 years. An overwhelming 72% of trading volume was in securities with maturity of more than 7 years. This is in synchronisation with the maturity profile of outstanding government securities wherein only 29% of securities are less than 5 years of maturity. As much as 41% of securities have more than 10 years of maturity.

This is in sharp contrast to the maturity profile of time deposits with the banking system. As much as 60% of individual time deposits (Rs 24.8 lakh crore) are in the maturity bucket of 1 to 3 years compared with 19% of deposits (Rs 7.8 lakh crore) in maturity bucket of more than 5 years. Retail investors in the more than 5 year bucket may consider investing in long-end bonds.

Another important characteristic of bond market is the share of foreign banks and primary dealers in trading activity. Foreign banks had a share of more than 22% in (sell) transactions compared with 16% for PDs. Private banks had a share of 26% and public sector banks 15%. Notably, foreign banks had less than 5% share in domestic deposits.

Walmart helps MSMEs access domestic, global customers

Chennai, Feb. 26: Walmart today launched a new Vriddhi e-Institute in Agra to provide small businesses in Uttar Pradesh access to skills and competencies to grow in a post-pandemic environment through online and offline channels such as Flipkart's marketplace and Walmart's international supply chain.

With the new e-Institute,

Walmart is expanding its Vriddhi Supplier Development Program towards empowering 50,000 MSMEs across India for growth. The program provides MSMEs with specific training to leverage modern commerce and get ready for opportunities in Flipkart's eCommerce marketplace, the supply chain of Flipkart Wholesale and Walmart's global sourcing operations, as well as the open marketplace.

Vriddhi works with MSME entrepreneurs wherever they are in their business journey. Uttar Pradesh-based businesses can join the Vriddhi training program to pursue opportunities to sell on Flipkart's online consumer marketplace and through the nationwide Flipkart Wholesale ecosystem.
