MOROCCAN EARTHQUAKE SURVIVORS huddled for a night in the open on the High Atlas Mountains on Saturday, a day after the country's deadliest quake in more than six decades killed more than 2,000 people and laid waste to villages.
Neighbours were still searching for survivors buried on the slopes, where houses of much brick, stone and rough wood were cracked open and mosque minarets toppled by the quake that struck late on Friday. The historic old city of Marrakech also suffered extensive damage.

The Interior Ministry said 2,012 people had been killed and 2,059 injured, including 1,404 in critical condition. The US Geological Survey said the quake had a magnitude of 6.8 with an epicentre some 72 km (45 milee) soutiwest of Marrakech.

In the village of Amizmiz near the epicentre, rescue workers picked through rubble with their bare hands. Fallen masonry blocked narrow streets Dutside a hospital, around 10 bodies laycovered in blankets as grieving relatives stood nearby.

"When I felt the earth shaking beneath my feet and the house learning I rushed toge tray kidsous. But my neighbours couldn't, said Mohamed Azaw. "Unfortunately no one was found alive in that family. The father and son were found dead and they are Rescuers stood atop the pancaked floors of one building in Amizania, bits of carpet and furniture protruding from the rubble. A long queue formed outside the only open shop as people sought supplies. Underfining the challenges facing rescuers, fallen boulders blocked a road from Amizamis to a nearby village.

Nearly all the houses in the area of Asni, some 40 km south of Marrakech, were damaged, and villagers were preparing to spend the night outside. Food was in short supply as roofs had collapsed on kitchens, said villager words and the search was on for survivors.

"Our neighbours are under the rubblecand poople are working hard to rescue them using available means in the village", he said.

The village of Tanaghart in the Anai area, on the side of a valley where the road from Marrakech rises up into the High Atlas, was the worst hit of any Ressers saw. Its once-pretty house, clinging to a steep hillside, were cracked open by the shaking ground. Those still standing were missing chunks of wall or plaster. Two mosque minarrets had fallen.

Abdellatif Ait Bella, a labourer, lay on the ground, barely able to misos speak, his head bandaged from wounds caused by falling debris. "We have no house to take him to and have had no food since yesterdy," said his wife Saida Bodchich, fearing for the future of their family of six with their sole breadwinner so badly hurt.
