Nazeer Ahmed had booked a flat in a housing project undertaken by Kishorkumar Gokaldas at K G Marina Bay in Chennai. The understanding between the builder and the flat purchaser was that the total consideration would be ₹8,987,263, which would include the price no allegation of deficiency in service of the flat and common areas totalling and so the complaint was not maintain-1,865 square feet (sq ft), a private terrace of about 475 sq ft, one "open sky parking", as well as ₹4,849,147 towards 788.41 sq ft as the undivided share in the land. It was agreed that possession would be given by July 27, 2008.

Ahmed took a loan of Ahmed could file a fresh complaint if ₹72 lakh from ICICI Bank for purchasing the flat. The loan a deficiency in amount was remitted by the service existed bank to the builder on July 27.

2006. The remaining amount was paid by Ahmed to the builder. Even though the total consideration of ₹8,987,263 was entirely paid, the builder failed to hand over possession by the agreed date.

The builder offered possession of the incomplete flat, but Ahmed found that he would be required to spend a considerable amount, such as ₹12 lakh on completing the incomplete work, ₹5 lakh towards Chennai Metropolitan Water Supply and Sewerage Board (CMWSSB) charges, and ₹44,760 towards maintenance charges. Besides this, he would also be required to bear ₹45,000 towards monthly rental charges for alternative accommodation. So, Ahmed stopped the payment of EMIs.

He also filed a consumer complaint before the National Commission in which he alleged that the builder and ICICI Bank had colluded with each other in disbursing the entire loan without considering the stage of completion of the construction.

Meanwhile, the bank declared the loan to have become a non-performing asset (NPA) and recalled it. Ahmed offered to settle the loan through a one-time, lump sum payment. The bank asked for ₹9,358,749.61, which Ahmed found unacceptable. So, the bank filed a case under the Sarfaesi Act and repossessed the flat. Ahmed then approached the National Commission, seeking a direction to hand over possession of the flat along with the private terrace and open parking. He also sought compensation for harassment.

The complaint was contested. The bank argued that the consumer dispute was not maintainable as the Sarfaesi Act bars the jurisdiction of any other tribunal, including consumer fora. The bank also pointed out that there was able under the Consumer Protection Act. The bank stated there was a default in repayment of the loan and since the flat was mortgaged as collateral security, repossession was justified. The National Commission observed that there was no document to show that the flat had been mortgaged as collateral security, but since the home loan had been obtained, the bank had first charge over the flat for default in repayment of the loan amount. It noted that the bank had followed the proper procedure by filing appropriate proceedings under the Sarfaesi Act and had legally taken repossession.

Since the proceedings before the Debt Recovery Tribunal were pending, the Commission observed that the complaint at this juncture was not maintainable. However, upon completion of the proceedings under the Sarfaesi Act, if it were found that there was deficiency in service. Ahmed would have the liberty to file a fresh complaint.

Accordingly, by its order of January 29, 2024, delivered by Subhash Chandra, the National Commission dismissed Ahmed's complaint.

Lock into high interest rates with a deferred annuity plan

Allocate just enough to generate a basic retirement income; over-investing in this illiquid product can backfire

reveral insurance companies, including the Life Insurance Corporation (LIC) of India, have launched deferred annuity plans in the past few weeks. Customers need to understand the role these plans can play in their retirement portfolio before investing in them.

Fixed, lifelong income

These plans offer a reliable income stream during retirement. "This is the only product that can provide a guaranteed income during retirement for as long as the customer lives," says Srinivas Balasubramanian, head of products, ICICI Prudential Life Insurance.

With average life expectancy increasing, most people are uncertain whether their savings can sustain them during their retirement. "Only an annuity can take care of longevity risk-the risk of outliving your savings," says Vivek Jain, head-investments business, PolicyBazaar.

Customers can use them to benefit from the current peak interest rates. "Choosing this option helps individuals lock in rates today for an annuity that starts making payouts in the future," says Vaibhav Kumar, head-products, Max Life Insurance.

Interest rates have been declining over decades. "Not buying a deferred annuity today could mean you could get a lower rate when you buy an immediate annuity at the time of retirement," says Jain.

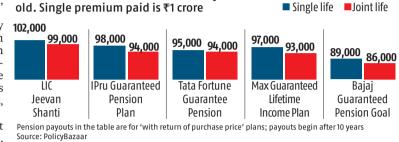

Kumar adds that since the customer does not receive annuity payouts for the first few months or years, the amount of annuity payable increases.

This plan also provides protection against market volatility. It is also a simple product that customers can easily relate to. "You pay a certain amount to the insurer, which then gives you a fixed sum after retirement for the rest of your life," says Deepesh Raghaw, a Securities and Exchange Board of India (Sebi) registered investment advisor (RIA).

Kumar highlights that the obligation

RECEIVE FIXED. LIFELONG PAYOUTS AFTER RETIREMENT

Pension payouts below are for joint life option where both husband and wife are 50 years to pay regular premiums promotes for the payouts to commence. disciplined saving.

Returns not inflation-proof These plans pay a fixed amount and hence do not offer protection against inflation. "A pension amount that is adequate today may not suffice after 10 years, given a consumer inflation rate of 6-7 per cent," says Raghaw.

Their returns are also usually not high. Customers could earn a higher return from equities. "If you need the money after, say, 10 or 15 years, you have the option to take more risk by investing in a basket of diversified equity mutual funds, where it would grow at a faster rate," says Raghaw.

These products lack flexibility. For instance, if you purchase an annuity at 40 with payouts starting at 60, but much longer may go for these plans," decide to retire early at 50 due to a windfall, you will still have to wait until 60

Their illiquid nature can cause issues Consider a scenario where you are 40, saving for your daughter's college education in 10 years while also investing in an annuity for retirement. Unexpected expenses arise, leaving you short of funds for her education. However, the money invested in the annuity is locked in and cannot be withdrawn.

Opt if you prioritise certainty

People who prioritise long-term financial stability should go for them. "They are ideal for those seeking a reliable source of income in retirement," says Kumar. Customers in their late 40s or early 50s may consider them. "Those who believe that current interest rates are attractive but may not remain so for says Balasubramanian. The alternative is to invest in a diversified portfolio of mutual funds over the next decade and subsequently purchase an immediate annuity plan. "That approach may not resonate with people who desire financial certainty," adds Raghaw.

With or without return of purchase price?

In the with-return of purchase price (RoPP) option, which is more popular, the premiums are paid back to the nominee once the annuitant dies. "This option is beneficial if the annuitant dies early after retirement. The premiums are returned to the nominee, ensuring the money is not lost," says Raghaw.

Jain informs that many Indians use it to leave wealth behind to the next generation. However, this option also results in a lower monthly pension.

The without-RoPP option offers a higher pension, providing greater financial security during retirement. "Go for this option and maximise your pension. Use other investments you may have for legacy purposes," says Jain.

Consider both return and brand

Buy the annuity from a reputable brand. "This is the product where the customer has the longest relationship with the insurer. The trustworthiness. scale size and reputation of the brand become important parameters," says Balasubramanian.

Compare returns offered by various insurers. Calculating the internal rate of return (IRR) is difficult as the product does not have a finite life. A simple solution is to compare the pension amount different insurers are promising.

Go with an insurer whose services are digitally advanced. "You don't want to visit the branch in your 60s or 70s for things like existence verification," says Balasubramanian.

Kumar suggests choosing the deferment period carefully. "A longer deferment leads to a higher annuity rate," he says. Married persons must buy a jointlife annuity so that the spouse continues to get the pension after them. Avoid putting your entire retirement corpus in annuity plans. "Use this product to generate the basic income you will need in retirement. The rest should be in liquid and growth assets," says Raghaw.
