Opinion, Insight Out

A dawn of third globalisation?

This could be an era where geo-political issues are a precondition for cross-border integration

The first globalisation epoch in 19th-century Britain was driven by the Industrial Revolution. The second epoch in the 20th century was driven by the American dream and the rise of the United States. The third epoch is being driven by the rise of China and the need for a new global order.

China has been the first of globalisation, where the world is not just a market but a stage. It is a new era of globalisation, where the world is not just a market but a stage. It is a new era of globalisation, where the world is not just a market but a stage.
