BERKSHIRE PHPOSTS NEARLY 50-BN LOSS

WARREN BUFFETT’S BERKSHIRE Hathaway Inc., America’s largest insurer by market value, posted a first-quarter net loss of $50.05 billion, or $7,771.6 billion per share, with losses from investing in technology stocks. The company’s net worth fell to $391.4 billion, or $53,771.6 billion per share.

Berkshire Hathaway Inc., run by the 90-year-old billionaire, said the biggest hits came from losses on technology stocks, including Netflix Inc., Uber Technologies Inc., and Facebook Inc. The company’s profit from operations also fell 13% in the first quarter, to $9.2 billion.

Buffett, who became CEO of the Omaha, Nebraska-based company in 1966, has praised his company’s ability to generate cash from business operations. "We have never had a problem," he said in February.

Berkshire Hathaway’s stock slid 5.4% on Friday, the biggest daily loss since February 2020. The company’s net worth fell 11% during the quarter, a bigger decline than any Berkshire Hathaway has reported in the last decade.

"We can’t say that the market is wrong," Buffett said at a meeting of shareholders last month. "The market is the result of the expectations of all those participants." He said he expected the market to "bounce back" after it rallies.

Berkshire Hathaway’s quarterly earnings report comes at a tough time for investors, who have seen shares of technology companies fall this year.

Daily testing scaled up to 4k to 74k a month

With about 4% of sample sites showing a positive result, it is now the objective of the testing to scale up to a maximum of 74,000 tests a month. The number of tests performed is a measure of how widespread the virus is in the population, and will be scaled up to an initial level of 4,000 a month.

The Indian government is working with the private sector to ramp up testing capacity and has already authorized private laboratories to conduct tests.
