SoftBank has recently been under pressure to draw attention for itself as the value of its investment in the firm’s $40 billion SoftBank Vision Fund, which has been struggling to make profits. The company’s failure to return on its investments in companies such as WeWork and Oyo has led to a significant decline in the fund’s value. In addition, SoftBank’s strategy of investing in startup companies has been criticized for its high failure rate.

Corrections to 2019-2020 Financial Results

SoftBank Group Corporation has issued a correction to its 2019-2020 financial results due to an error in the presentation of the company’s investment in Chinese ride-hailing company Didi Chuxing. The correction will have a significant impact on the company’s financial statements for the fiscal year ended March 31, 2020.

SoftBank’s Stock Price

SoftBank’s stock price has been on a downward trend since last year, due to a series of failed investments and a decline in the company’s overall financial performance. The company’s strategy of investing in unproven technologies and startup companies has been criticized for its high risk.

SoftBank’s Future

SoftBank is seeking to diversify its portfolio of investments and return to profitability. The company is exploring new investment opportunities in areas such as healthcare and renewable energy. SoftBank is also looking into the possibility of selling some of its existing investments to raise cash.

South Korea’s largest telecom services provider, SK Telecom Co., has scrambled to deliver an ambitious “5G-first” launch plan by the end of this year. The company had been planning to launch in early 2020, but the coronavirus pandemic has set back its timeline.

Funding for 5G Rollout

SK Telecom has been working with major global 5G equipment providers, including Samsung Electronics and Huawei, to ensure a smooth rollout of the technology. The company has been particularly focused on ensuring that its network is secure, given the potential for cyber attacks.
