PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP

The president said on Saturday that he had not spoken with China’s leader, Xi Jinping, in a “long time” and was “not interested” in continuing the relationship. He added that much of the broader breakdown in communications that is striking concern among former officials from both sides.

When the Trump administration first took office, there were about 100 officials across the country who were responsible for every aspect of U.S.-China relations, including 20 people focused on the so-called “100 Days” initiative. That team was cut back to less than 30 people, and at that point fewer than 10 of those officials had any experience working on China, and most of them were in their 30s.

The Thai government on Saturday defended its plan to sell state-owned assets as part of a broader economic recovery plan, despite opposition from some of its citizens.

The government has announced plans to sell up to 20% of state-owned assets, including 70% of the country’s shares in the National Oil and Gas Authority, as part of a policy to reduce the country’s debt.
