INTELLIGENCE AGENCIES have prime targets identified: the Uighur State contains the world's largest concentration of Muslims, with many ethnic groups from China's Xinjiang region. The US and China are both interested in the Uighurs to keep them under control.

The US and China have been warned about the possible threat of a Uighur uprising in Xinjiang. The US has warned that the Uighurs are at risk of being suppressed by the Chinese government. The Chinese government has denied these allegations and says it is simply trying to promote economic development in the region.

Despite the warnings, the US and China are taking steps to prevent a Uighur uprising. The US has imposed sanctions on Chinese officials and entities involved in human rights abuses in Xinjiang. China has also taken steps to tighten its control over the region, including increasing military presence and restricting travel.

Pakistan has an area of 80,000 square miles that it claims as its own, but India disputes this claim. The Siachen Glacier is a barren, snowy area located in the Ladakh region, with an estimated area of 80,000 square miles.
