BJP hopes to utilise the collective strength of its leaders

New Delhi/March 18
Having not declared a chief minister ahead of the Delhi Assembly elections, the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) is hoping to utilise the collective strength of its leaders in its attempt to unseat AAP chief Arvind Kejriwal.

“It is correct that we haven’t declared a chief minister as yet, but it is certain that all our leaders who are contesting the elections will pull in the same direction,” said a party leader.

The move comes after five-time Congress MLA from Matia Mahal Shoaib Iqbal joined Arvind Kejriwal’s Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) on Monday ahead of the assembly elections in Delhi. The effort to win the assembly elections is to utilise the collective strength of leaders like Manoj Tiwari, who is also a Lok Sabha MP from North-East, Union minister and former chief minister Harsh Vardhan, another MP Pravesh Verma, who is a politician from a marginalised community, and Raman Boli, a councilor from the AAP who is contesting as an independent candidate.

The party insiders say that different individuals, beginning for state chief Manoj Tiwari, who is also a Lok Sabha MP from North-East, Union minister and former chief minister Harsh Vardhan, another MP Pravesh Verma, who is a politician from a marginalised community, and Raman Boli, a councilor from the AAP who is contesting as an independent candidate, have not declared a chief minister ahead of the assembly elections, but have decided to focus on the collective strength of the party.
