Travel restrictions mount on China as coronavirus toll rises to 259

DAVID STAPF & THOMAS NANCE
Shanghai, February 1

The number of people diagnosed with a new coronavirus in China shot up 14% to 217 on Friday, the country’s health authorities said. The authorities also reported a sharp rise in the number of people infected with the virus outside of China, with the first cases reported in Thailand and Germany.

China’s National Health Commission reported 30 new cases on Friday, raising the total number of infections in the country to 1,379. The agency also reported 14 new deaths, bringing the total number of fatalities to 41.

The new cases were reported in Beijing, Shanghai, and the southern provinces of Guangdong, Hubei, and Zhejiang.

Outside of China, a total of 11 new cases were reported, including three in Thailand, two in Japan, one in South Korea, one in Germany, and one each in Malaysia, Canada, Taiwan, and the United States.

Scientists say the virus is highly contagious and can spread between people before symptoms appear.

The virus has also been detected on international flights, with at least two cases reported in Japan and South Korea.

In Japan, a student who had recently visited China was diagnosed with the virus on Friday. The student was being treated at a hospital in the city of Osaka.

In South Korea, a woman who had traveled to China last month was diagnosed with the virus on Monday.

The World Health Organization has declared the outbreak a global health emergency, and governments around the world are taking steps to contain the spread of the virus.

In China, the government has implemented strict quarantine measures in cities and provinces with the highest number of cases.

In other parts of the world, governments are要求 people to stay home and avoid large gatherings.

The virus, which originated in the city of Wuhan, has spread to at least 20 other countries and territories, including the United States, Canada, Mexico, Thailand, Japan, South Korea, and several European countries.

The number of confirmed cases worldwide has surpassed 21,000, with more than 400 deaths reported so far.

Experts say that the virus is highly contagious and can spread between people before symptoms appear.
